Hi folks,

Sector rotation is a common phenomena in the marketplace and some share traders, who know WHEN certain industries will shine, can make some very profitable trades !~!

Last year, we were predominantly trading energy stocks, which was the best performing sector, by far ... energy sector up 40% overall for 2004, in Oz.

At that time, we looked at the longer-term cycle of planet Uranus and we saw how it can be used to major anticipate sector rotations.

Going into 2005, we can expect a continuation of strength in the same markets sectors, particularly in “liquids”, like beer, wine, oil, water, etc.

Looking for trading opportunities in 2005 ...?

Of course we will be watch the dates pertaining to the planetary stations of all retrograde cycles for 2005, as guide to market timing in some sectors and individual stocks.

Many of these stations have marked key dates, for the marketplace, in the past. For example, check January 23, 2003, where Mercury was on station to go direct ... next day was the start of a significant fall, that lasted for the next 2 months.

Notice, the level of our XJO index, when Mercury went retrograde on Jan 02,03 and compare it to the level, when it went direct again, 3 weeks later, on Jan 23rd, 2003.

..... and there's many more instances throughout past trading years, that highlight the value of monitoring the retrograde cycles.

Last year, we witnessed the Uranus ingress into Pisces, an event most of us will see just once, in our lifetime.

In 2005, astrotraders will be looking for cyclical changes in some market sectors in July 2005, particularly as Saturn moves from a cardinal water sign, into a fixed fire sign.

As cold, dry Saturn makes its ingress into Leo, we may see a severe drought and fire storms on the west coast of USA and in UK too (?)

Saturnic trading opportunities may arise in the biotech sector, specifically related to treatment of blood-disorders, high fevers, heart disease or rheumatism, particularly related to the back.

Late April to mid-July 2005 will also bring us an inconjunct aspect (150 degrees) between Jupiter and Uranus, which may well put the spotlight back onto concerns, about world security.

A positive spin-off about security concerns will be the many new developments, attainable only, by the "bridging combination" of hi-tech Uranus and the flexibility of the mutable Pisces sign.

2005 trading opportunities .....

..... be alert for trading opportunities in drugs, hi-tech, biotech, energy, beer, telecoms and wine sectors, as they should pick up again, in 2005.

"Liquid opportunities" in oil, wine, water, fishing, pharmaceuticals, shipbuilders, aquaculture, breweries and distillers, particularly those with hi-tech processes may provide some clues for trading targets.

We have already had a good run in the brewery and wine sectors, with our FGL analysis and in 2005, we should see more mergers and acquisitions in the wine industry, as industry consolidation gains pace and companies return to profitability ... :)

We have already seen many counters in the oil sector perform exceptionally well in 2004 and right now many of these have retraced to new entry levels, as we move into 2005.

Whilst there's many oilers' charts, showing they are almost primed for new upmoves, going into 2005, they are mostly "situation stocks" that have current wells going down ..... would like to see the crude oil price come off a bit more, to make a low around US$36.60/bbl.

As tipped last year, digital photography was a huge winner and it seems to have more potential yet, especially with the advances in broadband networks, that offer very fast download and retrieval times.

So, until Uranus enters Aries in May 2010, we can expect some very innovative solutions to old challenges and the development of some radical new ideas, in many sciences, including astrology.

After May 2010, the pace in NEW technology and development should increase dramatically.

Improved power generation, using sophisticated steam turbines and other NEW power generation methods will also be devised, to satisfy our insatiable thirst for electrical power.

Aussie stocks GDY is a good example, using "hot rock" technology to generate steam for power generation.

To reduce our dependence on fossil fuels, further advances in breaking down water for a fuel source, will likely be seen over the next 7 years, too ..... wind-farm generator PHY is another good example.

..... and, we will likely see a bunch of new floats, on the back of some exciting NEW theories, that will seem to be quite extraordinary, at first.

It is our job as astrotraders, to recognize the new opportunities, as the longer-term sector rotations become obvious and present us, with some new trading vehicles.

Profitable trading to all, throughout 2005 ..... ☺

Happy New Year all
