

Enjoy this thought provoking book of poetry with a friend and expriencing healing.

Marva Collins-Bush was born and raised in Bastrop, Louisiana. She attended Morehouse High School in that city. She always had a passion for writing and wrote and produced skits and plays every summer during her elementary and junion high school years.

She wrote short stories for her husband and friends as a young wife and mother as a means of communicating her feelings.

Since her retirement from the workforce she has began writing in earnest. She is currently working on a history of her hometown.

This author is an avid journal writer as well.

Screams From The Heart Of A Woman

Marva Collins-Bush

Screams From The Heart Of A Woman

Marva Collins-Bush

This is the book of poetry you've been waiting for. It works well in group reading settings, and as an aid for working with battered and abused women. It takes the sadness and makes sense of it, enabling the reading to move toward healing and living life on life's terms. A labor of love by this author.

