

Yes Robert A Enns has begun to reach his riveting, pulsating, best, in this New Work of his.

It is a Historical Gothic Thriller set on one of its keenest levels. It is a blood pounding adrenalin rush of energy in book form. That I found nigh impossible to put down.

It opens its pages as the son of 'Vlad Dracula' is born into a world that the young baby boy has an inkling it has somehow existed in before. The boys name is James, and his Mother is Selest, a very naïve innocent woman of her times, the 14 century. James and Selest share a loving respectful life; where at points Dracula and his three daughters of the night are very much in the shadows. There are so many dark tales told, spells cast from the midst of the night; that it is all too encompassing to relate here. Yet within these pages you will walk alone with candle alight be careful where you tread, you just might be caught in its web.

Biography

Robert was born in Murrayville, closest hospital to Cloverdale where he went to school and grew up. He went through many traumatic times as a youngster suffering gravely with Asthma and a debilitating depression. He moved to Penticton at 18. He was married briefly, and has had successes, but none to equal the joy of sharing his imagination with the world.
