Introduction

The 101 Best All-Time Quotes About Finding Financial Success is the quintessential "must have" pocket guide to remind yourself that, you too, can find financial success. This Book is full of fiscal wisdom from the mouths of geniuses who have managed to succinctly capture complex financial theories and ideas and condense them into modest expressions that have withstood the tests of time.

I have always loved and admired quotes from famous people (and even a few infamous people). Many of the most quoted individuals of all time have wisdom that only comes from hard work, keen observation, trial-and-error, and life experience. I have used quotes throughout my lifetime to motivate and inspire myself and others. The best quotes are timeless and universal and can be applicable to a multitude of situations.

When writing my book, The Family Guide To Finances I researched thousands of quotes to find the most influential, thoughtful, and relevant to personal finances. I searched for quotes that would facilitate wisdom and inspire action! Due to printing and production limitations I was only able to use a handful of these quotes in my book. Nevertheless, I wanted to share these quotes with the world so I decided to create a collection of the best quotes about finding financial success. Some of these quotes date back hundreds of years but are no less important for today's difficult economic times. Some of these quotes may at first, appear out of context. However I encourage you to alter your perspective, if necessary, to discover their application for finding financial success.

Perhaps the best known and most frequently quoted legend of fiscal prowess is Benjamin Franklin. He was a hard working and innovative man and was one of America's earliest rags-to-riches successes. It has been well documented that, while a man of great wealth, he lived well below his means and championed frugality. His work ethic and innovative spirit made Franklin a self-made man and he was quick to point out that "He that rises late, must trot all day, and shall scarce overtake his business at night, while laziness travels so slowly that poverty soon overtakes him."

Occasionally there is historical disagreement with regards to the true origination of famous quotes. The author gives credit to the most popularly believed orator in these instances. We apologize in advance for any mistakes we may have made in this effort.

You will find great wisdom and insight within these pages. If you can find a way to internalize some of these sayings, I implore you to do so. I have found inspiration in these quotes and I hope that you do as well!
