

The animals have just been told that people are moving into their jungle.

"That sounds good," said Kangy Kangaroo. "They will be so scared they will never come back to our woods."

"I know it sounds good," said Dr. Leo Lion, "but it won't work. They have nets and guns. They will either catch us or kill us."

"Kill us?" said horrified Kangy. "Would people kill us just to live in our woods. How much land do they need to live in? Are they hogs?"

"Yes, unfortunately Dr. Leo is right," said Miss Bumples. "We can't fight people because they are too strong. We will have to move before they find us and put us in a zoo."

"Move, that isn't fair," said Griffy Giraffe. "I wish I could talk to people. I would bend down and tell them that this is our home and ask them to leave us alone. I was born in these woods. I want to stay here with all of my friends."

"Miss Bumples, can't you talk to them and tell them to go away?" asked Kangy.

"I have never talked to people," answered Miss Bumples. "You can't stop people when they want more land."

"Oh please try," said Eliza Elephant.

"Well okay," said Miss Bumples. "I will try to talk to them."

"I will go with you and hide in the trees," said Mabel Monkey. "So if you get in trouble I will run home."

Once again the animals watched their friends go into the woods.