Dedications

I thank God for allowing me to write this book he has inspired me in many ways to remind the Christian Marriages to treasure the gift he gave to them. The marriage relationship is dear to Gods heart because he created the Marriage union.

I dedicate this book to my husband Jahi J. Uzzell whom I love dearly and stand in love with. I thank God for allowing us to come together grow and share what he has given us.

This book is also dedicated to Christian Marriages who will develop and grow within their union. I pray this book will encourage Godly marriages to prosper, be restored as they learn how to grow together in God and in love.

TREASURE YOUR MARRIAGE

Treasure your marriage by cherishing your spouse

Treasure Your Marriage

There are hidden treasures

I placed within your marriage that will take you time to see as you spend days, months and years together

you will learn how to operate in and appreciate this beautiful relationship that I hold dear to me and gave to thee.

I have gifted you with this treasure here on earth

the one I have created, designed and re-birthed.

I want you to cherish the one I placed by your side but remember to always let me be your guide.

Never forget to show my love, the love that is from Heaven above.

My love is unconditional, patient and kind my love will guide you through the test of time.

My love will bind your hearts together as one.

Treasure your marriage by cherishing your spouse

If I was writing a general letter to spouses about marriage I would begin by saying welcome to your union of love where God intended you to be there are many hidden treasures you will find in your mate so cherish the journey where you will explore many new things about your significant other that you never saw on the bare surface.

God wants you to begin searching and not just be complacent with who you think your husband/wife is he wants to develop you to find the beautiful treasure that lies hidden within you and what is hidden within them.

There is great value in our Marriage relationship and if we are not careful we can devalue or disregard it. We must recognize the treasure of this relationship and realize it has great worth.

The value potential is much greater than silver and gold and it yields greater profit because it is an investment of a lifetime.

When we look at the word treasure it means to regard or treat as precious: cherish, great value and highly priced. When we treasure someone we learn to cherish the person hold them in high regard and place a great value on that person or relationship.

We know the worth and value of that person. When we cherish someone we hold and treat them as dear, we feel love for them and care for that person.

God has given us hidden treasure in our marriage union and he wants us to cherish our spouse by loving them in order to do that we must allow God to love through us.

We must also learn how to value our spouses, not devalue them or the marriage relationship.

God wants us to learn how to serve each other in love. We must also learn how to be happy and fulfilled with the choice we have chosen and that is our significant other our spouse that God blessed us with.

When you are happy with your choice you become content with your spouse and your union. You are not sidetracked by other desires that are not healthy to your union.

God wants to settle us in our marriage union there are so many couples that are not settled in their marriage. When you are settled you are not stagnated, swayed or easily moved.

No matter what you may experience whether unusual circumstances or life oppositions you will be able to work together and remain committed because you are settled in the marriage and also dedicated to one another and your relationship.

God wants us to grow in him and also together, he wants us to grow in love with one another.

There are many positive and negative life experiences a marriage union will face we were designed by God to endure the hardships, enjoy the beauty of creating shared memories, experience joy and bask in the fun but also pull together and work as a team through the difficult moments that tests our union from time to time.

Treasure your marriage by cherishing your spouse

We can grow and become stronger if we value the tests that are set before us.

We can cherish our spouse in the greatest of times and also in the times of facing adversity and hardship. We can become a victorious team built to last no matter what we experience together. It is how we face these day to day life experiences that will determine our outcome.

There are so many Christian marriages that are ending in divorce because they never had the opportunity to grow together and flourish and see the value of their marriage. They face various differences and are easily swayed to end it when they can't come to resolve or resolution.

Some individuals came in the union with an ideal of fantasy how they think marriage would or should be. Some have the fantasy that being in love was all you need to remain happy and together.

You never have to nurture or work through issues in the relationship as they occur. This fantasy causes blindness and creates a false sense of belief that romance only or the emotional state of being in love is all you need to stay together and remain happy. They welcome the blissful feeling only and draw away or dismiss the realities that come along with being married.

I challenge this false belief by saying once we walk in covenant relationship after we said our vows we are called by God to stand in love not fall out of love.

There is no such thing as the love has died in my opinion. However I agree with the statement two people can grow apart or be in different but Gods love never grows cold or dies. We must admit if God placed his spirit within us and we are children of God then we also have the capacity to allow God to love through us.

We must surrender ourselves to God daily in order for this to be achieved in us and through us.

We can grow apart and also walk in disagreement this means we can walk in the spirit of disagreement with our spouse and this can cause us to see them in a different light just because we are walking in opposition instead of walking in agreement with them.

We can also embrace discord, anger, resentment and ungodly behaviors that will drive a wedge in between the spouse and eventually damage the relationship.
