I went to the Easter Egg Roll
at the White House.

I met the Easter Bunny!

I hunted for Easter eggs.

I watched people sing and dance.

President Obama read me a story.

I danced with the First Lady.

I ran on an obstacle course.

I learned
some cool tennis moves.

I watched President Obama
play basketball!

I did some awesome
yoga poses.

YOGA GARDEN

I dyed & designed some Easter eggs.

I jumped and stretched.

I learned about science.

White House Easter Eggs

Wow! Official
White House
Easter Eggs

The official 2015 White House Easter Egg set included one commemorative egg of each color plus a Special Edition “Bo and Sunny” egg. The “Bo and Sunny” egg has a natural American birchwood finish - this is the first time a White House Easter Egg has featured a natural wood finish since the Clinton Administration!

The White House Easter Egg Roll During the Obama Administration

During the Obama administration, an estimated 30,000 tickets were distributed for each year's event. Participants were assigned to one of 5 different time slots, with the event starting at 7:45am and concluding around 5:45 pm. There were a large number of activities for the participants throughout the South Lawn. Due to the number of activities available and the large crowds it was necessary for participants to choose just a few of the activities during the approximately hour and a half time that they were allowed on the White House grounds. President Obama and his family, along with the Easter Bunny have made an appearance at each Easter Egg Roll during his administration. The President and Mrs. Obama have offered a few remarks before participating in some of the activities. The theme for the 2009 Egg Roll was "Let's Go Play!" and the 2010 Egg Roll was "Ready, Set, Go!" The theme for the 2011 Easter Egg Roll was "Get Up and Go!" and the theme for the 2012 event was "Let's Go, Let's Play, Let's Move!" The theme for 2013 was "Be Healthy, Be Active, Be You" and the theme for 2014 was "Hop into Healthy, Swing into Shape." Each event featured a variety of activities to encourage physical activity and healthy eating, consistent with Mrs. Obama's "Let's Move" initiative to combat childhood obesity. The Obamas continued the living healthy themes during their final two events in 2015 and 2016.
