

PERSONAL METAMORPHOSIS INTO SELF

I'm good. Been strippin' away the layers of outdated programming.

Some have been leaving willingly... and some... well... not so willingly;-}

I'm finding out that to, "Know Thyself" is one thing... to "Become Thyself" is a whole other thing that requires many quantum leaps into the uncharted territory of ones soul with no idea how it will go and where the journey is going to take you and what it will require of you in order for you to live the next level of your destiny...

Now I understand what a caterpillar must feel when it starts its metamorphosis into a butterfly... kind of like becoming a mother... you know so many others who have made the transformation, forgetting the pain like a distant memory... though worth each moment as you stare into the wonderment of your child's eyes that shine like the Sun in Ra. Yet no one can prepare you for your own personal journey and experience of germination, incubation and manifestation of true life. None-the-less, though scary at times... it's been beautiful... challenging, yet deeply rewarding in ways so very unexpected.

The peace that letting go without attachments brings... the process of mastering self and the striving to make it happen... to figure out the how's, when's, what's, where's... and to just let that go.

To rest in the true knowing that it will become what I act upon from focused envisioning, that which I desire for myself to experience, and to live life according to my own terms... as I desire my life and know my true Self to be...

To know that the universe will take care of the how's, the when's, the where's, to my what's is enough.

This is the state of being that we are meant to exist in, but for some reason, at times, alludes our perceptions.

Yet in time, all mysteries become revelations, and all of life, a theatrical showcase of one within the many where we portray all the parts simultaneously... God's desire to experience Itself, and to know Itself spontaneously just for the thrill of it!
