

BJOYFL is a humorous quirky tale about the lessons an older student learns inside and outside the walls of lecture halls, where her pursuit of happiness seems more like a course in frustration 101 or a well researched paper on relationships that make you feel like screaming or tearing your hair out.

Do any of us ever really achieve the inner peace we want to achieve, or are we all just plodding through life with no clue? Explore the seemingly weird path this single woman goes down during her quest to discover what the heck will ever make her happy.

Men and women who love Barry's humorous dark novel Puddles will also enjoy Bjoyfl.

Lynn Barry earned a degree in Writing Arts/Criminal Justice from SUNY Potsdam, cum laude; and has worked for a weekly newspaper, written a humor column, worked at a home for wayward teens, volunteered at Auburn Maximum Security Prison, subbed for grades K-12, and enjoys spending time with her husband of thirty plus years, four kids, their significant others, and six grandkids. Barry is currently working on mastering the crystal flowered flute she received as a gift for Mother's Day.
