

Foreverness

(You're always going to exist,...somewhere)

By

Ernest Norman Paquin

Introduction:

“It doesn't add up that this Satan character can be immortal, if he was then he would still be bound to Foreverness you'd think , and would have no influence on any mortal beings, an aggressive sinister cult in this world would though... they too are mortal,”

“Some believe we are in purgatory, some believe we are in Hell, so the only option left for the remaining is; We're still in Heaven now in ruins...”

“If you cannot see Heaven behind the clouds or past the stars then you must still be in it, amidst the unrest...”

“One Ancient enemy is; Gravity.”

“Every soul was thought up in the beginning by the same imagination, that's what makes us equals, there were so many of us it would've been easier to count the number of stars...”

“A person's beliefs maybe wrong and they may not be aware of it, however, any belief that keeps them and others out of harms way must have some truth it...”

Explanation;

Heaven exists now and always will in the Kingdom of Foreverness. I believe that we're still in Heaven it's just that a disruptive 3D image has been superimposed onto it or photo-shopped or even air brushed to the point giving many the impression that we're now in Hell, which would have the same appearance value as Heaven being in ruins. A temporary misfortune with knowledge of evil let loose as it were but, still being in Heaven which could very well be paused for the moment.

Anyway, if you were to look in the mirror and then look at and listen to your surroundings you know you exist, you know you're there. Now, close both your eyes and cover your ears and you can't see or hear anything but...you still know you're there. You see, your always going to exist forever, somewhere, and you can't get out of it, Amen. That's the knowing of Foreverness.

Many wonder where exactly urges and impulse actions come from within a person. Is it just what that it is, a simply defined urge or impulse action? Or is it a deeper unconscious or even subconscious reaction to something that has either been flung at us or presented to others on a silver platter and they “made their bones” with it proving their worthiness to a dark and sinister cult? This sinister cult is not part of Foreverness, it is merely a physical boycott of morals, ethics and commandments and rules.

It seems as if the action of this ongoing rebellion is a wave of compromised energy that penetrates everything that lives. It stands to reason that everything that has lived and is still alive had or has its own energy which draws it nearer, and for some invites it in making them forget their true radiant being that is now wrapped in an organic life form. Any life form is fragile and vulnerable in this world's atmosphere. Outside of it none of us stand a chance in the dark and cold outer space, the atmosphere knows this. Near death experiences felt warmth and saw light everywhere, the way it used to be. This compromised energy activates too much in a living being which is overkill for the physical and emotional traits, it kinda mocks the limits of all life.

Urge; noun – the act of trying to persuade, solicit, stimulate.

(in that brief definition it appears as if this Cult preps or compromises one's senses and emotions in advance so that they succumbed much easier to this very same urge, weakens them in advance if you will.)

Impulse; noun - a sudden force causing motion, the product of the average value of any force multiplied by the time in which it acts. (as if one were momentarily possessed, whereas a truly wicked person's emotions are so rotted to the point to where they suffer from not only madness but Mortal torment, meaning; none of the emotions work at all. Divine torment means; when every emotion kicks-in at the same time.)

The only reason why a person is classified as being truly wicked is because all of their emotions are rotted like I mentioned, they weren't born that way. Granted some babies are born with addictions or impairments which is not there fault, it just stands to reason that some of their emotions become compromised early on and they hate it at first not knowing why. Somewhere down the road, Someone they meet and grow to trust will tell them their reason why they're impaired. They could either say “God made you special,” or “God punished you for your actions in a previous life, or punished you in advance for what you're about to do in this one, might as well see it through”...

It all comes down to not only who they trust, but who makes sense to them at the time depending on the emotional state they are in at that moment.

Remember; Impulse; noun - a sudden force causing motion, the product of the average value of any force multiplied by the time in which it acts.

Non-contact influence is a force, a verbal nudge in a certain direction is a force, being guided by energy either spiritually, physically or emotionally is a force. Also, good or evil notions or hints from others is a force. Sometimes it's hard to tell the difference.

Everything but wickedness and abuse in this reality is in Heaven as well. You have your kindness, Love, entertainers, you have your great influences of all manner, you have your scribes, no need for military or Law enforcement because all entities are on the same side, less gravity, no tomorrow or yesterday because the present time moves as one constant. Since the great change in the Garden of Eden Heaven seems to have been paused for the moment.

It all sounds unreal, boring and even a crack-pot belief I know, but that's because this reality has compromised our emotions to the point to where we now rely on faith of which we cannot see.

Actually it's your soul that sees it and eventually remembers the way Heaven was and still is and that we are in it now while it's in ruins. Believe me, this reality is all just a temporary misfortune, and this is as worse as it gets...

If your considered famous or of great influence in this world and you got there because many believed you sold your soul for all eternity or joined a cult belonging to achieve what you have, You didn't, you would've received it anyway without any deal and without one wing dipped in blood. If you are a entertainer now it means that you were also an entertainer in Foreverness which is why one is so good at it, their soul remembers. This cult has you believing that at the time it's offered it's the only way for you. They also have you convinced that if you don't sign the deal then someone else will and you will be quickly forgotten about or never heard of in the first place...malicious of them huh? What I'm saying is there is no spiritual value to it, your mortal physical self has temporary value and truly that's what they are after, and besides, what could they do with a soul? I mean, this cult believes we're already in Hell so where do you go from here? They each have one of their own souls and the same Great imagination thought theirs up as well. I think it's just that they put the fear of physical harm or even death in a person to garner more influence and capital gain that gets them to sign. They kinda mock the term profit-sharing. I mean, they're gonna physically die someday too right? At the moment they suffer from selfish one-dimensionalism, which many of us have at some point in our life. It's just a phase many of us outgrow, still many of them have'nt or won't, and some just can't.

When some people who have changed their minds about belonging to one of these cults it is very hard and/or damn near impossible to leave or escape them. If you try to warn the world of their sinister intentions then harm will come at you and will get to you.

Warning many of the sinister cult beliefs of lets say just one of them is baring false witness against them, do to the fact that there is a 3rd party cult fully responsible instead, and the one you are chastising is a mere affiliate of something bigger. So by pointing the finger at this smaller cult is baring false witness against them they believe. The bigger 3rd party cult knows this and continues to round the nearest corner and remain in secret as soon as consequences hits its mark, meaning you.

The Ten Commandments appear to be used as weapons in every case, they hold everyone to them, even the wicked. God may have wrote them but, Karma and all her fairness forwards them through consequences in the absence of God. Wicked mocks Karma as well and inflicts harm of its own sending out a clear brutal message.

(God's whereabouts in my belief is; the time travel accident in the Garden of Eden which triggered the Big Bang captured God in human form as well and displaced him somewhere else in time far enough from the beginning leading many to believe it was Eve's fault that God no longer speaks to us...not true. God is living in this reality with us, again somewhere else in time.)

So, we know you cannot sell your soul, however, it is known for many to have made a physical, mortal agreement with a sinister type cult for fortune and/or fame. You are bound to serve them and their adolescent whims or you will be soon forgotten in one form or another. Many believe that if you no longer fear the consequences and want out of the deal then they focus their attention on someone you care most about, many call this a blood sacrifice. Sort of like the way drug dealers ask for pictures of your children for keepsake in case you attempt to cross them. Pretty cold huh?

Remember this, it should ease you some, compared to eternity the average life span for anyone nowadays is a blink of an eye. The older you get then the faster it went as I see it.

A prophet only becomes a prophet when someone centuries later actually carries out or acts out his visions or writings. These prophets understood human behavior and emotional adaptation back then and merely, as a metaphor, bet on a winning horse in the future. These winning horses are called radicals and fanatics. They are a dime a dozen nowadays and form groups making it easier to act out whatever prophet's visions they read of first. These radicals and fanatics look like everyday people, or they do not look like everyday people and use sympathy and misunderstanding of their way of being to blend in, and it works. It is not truly incorrect to write that but profiling is either a hit or miss, and it has nothing to do with color, it never did. Many feel it is better to be safe than sorry though. They're not truly to blame for that either, it is that very same 3rd party cult. It traumatizes you and then allows the small affiliate cults to point your confusion and hatred at those they don't like anyway. These cultists sound juvenile don't they? Many of them don't even like each other, and there is “No honor amongst thieves...”

The main achievement these cult members have been successful at is; blinding your own soul with one-dimensionalism. They do this using your own physical being, it's easier to compromise that than the pure radiant energy of a soul, which is impossible to do. They do not want you to realize too soon in life that you are still in Heaven, they'd rather you not realize that at all, submit and just go with the flow and allow this rebellion to continue moving forward. They don't want you against them because they know they can't have you on their side with them, not knowingly anyway.

A guy I know said to me once that we've all sold our souls. I quickly responded with; “not knowingly I didn't.” He was more or less referring to what ever wrong I did in life, even the smallest things, I sold it, right then and there I sold my soul and a 3rd party cult member saw me do it. If you're a 9 year old boy and lied does that mean you sold your soul? I doubt that very much. That's just juvenile mockery that this 3rd party cult engages in. That is just so pathetic. They should really pick on someone their own size but they won't, easiest pickings are the most ruthless, and as I mentioned before that's how they prove their self an “make their bones”. If they attack a small minded naive target then they'll do what their told from that moment on and allowed to continue with their selfish, one-dimensional life. And whatever it is that they've done, they do not want ideas like time travel to take away the memory of their terrible act or even prevent it from happening at all. That's extreme selfishness is it not?

Here's a poem;

*You came into being not wanting to rebel,
some of them did and now praise they're in Hell,
God did not leave us he too is in this mess,
a temporary misfortune in the kingdom of Foreverness...*

*Time will be reset, it shall be undone,
all of the wickedness that took away are fun,
A Big Bang happened, an accident caused it,
it placed Heaven in ruins, it actually paused it,*

*Whether you there or whether your here,
you're still in Heaven so no need to fear,
Go back in time and undo this mess,
and restore Heaven to the Kingdom of Foreverness.*

-Ernest Norman Paquin-

What sounds and feels more real to me is;
there are at least 2 wicked cult agendas in practice and both are focused on controlling and furthering the direction of this Great rebellion that they too believe is going on, and neither will submit or surrender to the other...it's total control of it they're after. All cults believe no law, no God is going to tell them, "no, that's wrong". They also want this one-dimensional reality to continue for all time,
which would be greatly considered an ongoing echo

pinging off of this worlds atmosphere.

The gross interpretaion of a Master Race is also a participant in this ongoing Rebellion, this ongoing vicious cycle of madness, mayhem, control and abuse. Like I mentioned, an echo that pings off of this worlds atmosphere back onto us that all are trapped by.

Many throughout history have tried to pull off conquering everything but failed to do so at some point, and that's because good gained enough courage to dethrown these brutal rulers of man and did the 3rd party cult a favor by doing away with them once they reached the point of being of no more use. They then check them off of the list and focus on the next soul in line, who couldn't be anxious enough.

This deal like I mentioned, is only the temporary use of a physical being, they each have their own soul remember that. It's like being picked, or I dare say, offered a role in an ongoing movie series entitled "The Great Rebellion" of course. If you're no longer anxious or of use for a reoccurring role then your character will probably be replaced in one of the sequels with the next generation of anxiousness which is a more modern adaptation of this same rebellion. You on the other hand will simply fade behind the scenes and eventually be forgotten, and that's not such a bad thing.

I mentioned in the past that Shakespeare warned us of this ongoing rebellion with phrases like, "Oh what a terrible web we weave, when we practice to deceive..." It sounds as if he was both boasting about his role in it, but also warning the future not to take part. He too eventually faded behind the scenes and stayed there until his death.

This is from the internet Wikipedia in regards to Shakespeare;

Shakespeare died on 23 April 1616, at the age of 52. [\[64\]](#) He died within a month of signing his will, a document which he begins by describing himself as being in "perfect health". No extant contemporary source explains how or why he died. Half a century later, John Ward, the vicar of Stratford, wrote in his notebook: "Shakespeare, Drayton and Ben Jonson had a merry meeting and, it seems, drank too hard, for Shakespeare died of a fever there contracted", [\[65\]](#)[\[66\]](#) not an impossible scenario, since Shakespeare knew Jonson and Drayton. Of the tributes from fellow authors, one refers to his relatively sudden death: "We wondered, Shakespeare, that thou went'st so soon/From the world's stage to the grave's tiring room."[\[67\]](#)

(the Bubonic plague raged for many years in the latter half of Shakespeare life, still you ask, how did this plague begin?)

*“There was an apple plucked from a tree,
it tasted foul, something had poisoned thee,
The tree was now different unlike the rest,
what was to learn, was this a test,
She then asked Atom why is this so,
he tasted it and said he did not know,
The air was now bitter, the sky was now burned,
it is a test, what will we learn,
God was cast forward on his own travels,
Knowledge of Evil began to unravel,
Angels were captured into their next step,
Heaven now in ruins, clearly unkept,
Gravity's vice and the atmosphere's pollution,
help us dear Lord with a solution,
God heard this prayer further in time,*

his soul now remembers Heaven as does your's and mine,

He built a vessel not for space but for time, he was whisked away backwards in a blink of an eye,

He landed safely and canceled out the cause, which undid everything that placed Heaven in pause,

*He plucked an apple from the tree,
Foreverness restored in peaceful harmony...*
