

Newton's Law 2060

The Point of No Return

by D. S. Mills

I have written this book in the hope that many will read it and do whatever they can to save our world. It is based entirely on recorded factual accounts of some of the events that have occurred over the past two thousand years—events such as wars, religion, superstitions, and disasters, environmental and cosmic, which have shaped our way of life.

It is intended to show how religion has played a major part in manipulating people to achieve the political powers desired by radical religious zealots and their staunch followers at the brutal cost of human life and this planet. It is also an attempt to instill the absolute horror of war and terrorism in the hope that as a race of people, regardless of colour or persuasion, we can unite and prevent an impending disaster, which will destroy this wonderful planet of ours. My sarcasm of certain religions and their beliefs will become obvious in this work.

About the Author

I am a sixty-year-old man who firmly believes learning never stops. I suffer from a chronic illness and after all I have seen, felt, and experienced in this life, I need to impart some of that knowledge to others. I have spent many years on my own in desolate areas of Australia, working, studying, and wherever I could, helping others less fortunate than myself.

I am a former soldier of the Australian army, 1964-65, 1967-69 (National Service). I have recently remarried my first wife, Jacky, after a separation of thirty-five years. I spent some years in the Pilbara region of Western Australia as a branch trade union executive. I later studied theology and became an ordained minister of religion with the Church of Modern Disciples, and my last official act as such was to bury my father.

Over the past forty years, I have held some interesting positions: semi-driver, union executive (twice), soldier (three times), wild dog hunter, autopsy assistant, minister of religion, railway shunter/signalman, teacher, and woolclasser.

I believe we all should set goals, but rather than be disappointed if we do not achieve them, we should relish what we have learned along the way!
